New tools for alcohol management

Monash University GP-led research

Would you like to be better supported to discuss alcohol intake with your patients? Does your practice want to participate in GP-led research with an academic partner? Would you like to trial a new suite of tools for alcohol management, including delivering health information to patients?

Monash University is conducting GP-led research that is testing a new package of resources to increase brief interventions for alcohol use in general practice across Victoria.

This study will be conducted by Monash University and is funded by the Victorian Health Promotion Foundation (VicHealth).
