

Make Family Violence

Five times more Visible

Estimates are that each full time GP will see up to five women per week with underlying intimate partner violence, but be unaware violence is happening in these families.

Family Violence Quality Improvement Project

This is excellent opportunity for general practices to make an impact. Join our fully supported five month Quality Improvement (QI) activity and help better support people experiencing or at risk of family violence.

University of Melbourne research has shown that developing skills and confidence in primary care professionals is key. Both training and professional experience build confidence in dealing with violence as well as increased comfort in discussions with patients.

Participating general practices will receive in-practice education and support from Professor Kelsey Hegarty's team at the University of Melbourne's Safer Families Centre, among many other benefits.

More details are available at nwmpnh.org.au/tenders

Participating Practices receive:

- 40 Category 1 points
- $3,000 incentive payment
- QI and sustainability workshops
- In-practice education
- Family violence mentoring
- PIP QI - support
- Connection to local family violence support services

Apply NOW

Visit nwmpnh.org.au/tenders

Proudly delivered by NWMPHN in partnership with:

Believing In Children, Young People, Families & Their Future.

An Australian Government Initiative