

You have the right to:

- receive the best available health care
- be protected from harm
- share your views, and be heard and taken seriously
- ask questions and receive answers about everything that concerns you
- get information, in a way that is easy to understand
- take part in decisions about your care
- make decisions about your care, as much as you're able to
- have your privacy respected
- be treated with respect for your values, beliefs, identity, and culture, both as an individual and as part of your family
- be with and guided by your family, unless this is not in your best interest
- take part in education, play, creative activities and recreation, even if this is difficult due to your illness or disability.

Our responsibilities are to:

- listen to you and your family to make sure we understand what you need
- find you the best available health care service to meet your needs
- have systems that prioritise your safety, with clear policies and practices
- make sure all the adults in the organisation, who work with children, are safe adults
- talk to you about your right to be safe and listen to what you have to say
- work together to plan who to inform to ensure your safety
- take action
- treat your personal information confidentially and only share it with people who need to know.
